To meet this challenge, better and more efficient adaptive modulation and coding (AMC) techniques are desired. For example, newer Adaptive Modulation and Coding (AMC) technology includes the use of coding schemes such as Low Density Parity Check (LDPC) coding and turbo coding to exploit error correcting capabilities. For example, LDPC coding is known to yield a maximum information rate (bits per symbol) of up to about 3.84948, based on a Gallager B/2 LDPC code with a Shannon block error probability of about 9e-2. For AMS (Adaptive Modulation and Coding Schemes), the data rates in
