While creating a new document, you may have noticed an option to enable commenting on your work. With Adobe Photoshop, you have the best of both worlds. All your changes can be viewed in real-time on a new tab within the application. With commenting, you can now get feedback from your colleagues, clients, and even the world on the appearance of your design. They can leave a suggestion or offer a comment in the Comments panel in the bottom left of a new tab version. In the Comments panel, you can write new comments, as well as respond to, resolve, or delete existing ones and view comments from other collaborators. You can use pins and annotations in the review document and also add emojis in your comments. If the shared link is limited only to invited people as desired by the owner of the review link, then only those invited can add their comments. We've made substantial improvements to PSD commenting, so now you can speed up your review process with 1,000s of comments coming in real time all from within Photoshop itself. Better still, you can see the comments in context, where you can address each one in turn and have them appear in the comments panel in a single pane of content, so you can focus on just one comment at a time while the file is still open. When you're sharing a file with a collaborator, you may want to leave some of the content open in the background so you can easily add other comments with just a few clicks. And if you've ever opened a file and thought, "This should definitely be commented on, but I'll do it later." Then you'll be thrilled to know that now you can share the file directly with collaborators and allow them to update the file as they see fit. This lets you focus on upgrading the main Photoshop file while leaving minor changes to the background open to a reviewer.

(Photoshop, by the way, has no Good Taste or Quality Art button. It's up to you to decide what suits your artistic or personal vision and what meets your professional requirements.) I recently had a discussion with a colleague, who is a creative and uses both Lightroom and Photoshop. When he mentioned he has worked on Lightroom, I asked him what he thought of the updates to Photoshop. He had a couple of different comments on the matter. 933d7f57e6
