Lightroom is not what i want, because not only the storage part is not perfectly controllable, but the license web (project) is not a good idea. I am not a graphic designer, so I will not use Design Assets. I do not want to pay for every images all the time. Adobe Lightroom is awesome. I was an avid Apple Mac user, and I was extremely fascinated by the market share and software upgrades. After someone in my office dropped a Windows laptop on the floor, I had the chance to use a computer for the first time in about 15 years. I used Microsoft Word for the whole first month, and I still use word for my business and my personal use. For example, I have lost the exact location of the story I'm working on, so I can't find it again for homework, because it is stored in an "outlook.com" document. I switched to Apple's outstanding OS X Lion, and to Microsoft's Windows Office for my daily use, as I had to do all the data entry I could for two clients who were moving an office. I started am impressed that I can't find the exact location for a file I created two years ago. The OS X reignited my interest in computers. I watched the success of Apple's Mac computers, and I felt sorry for once my old Windows friends for not having the same advantages. I noticed they were happy about OS X Lion and Windows 8, and they were happy that Microsoft did not have the same win. So the way Apple and Microsoft design their OS is different. You can try as many Linux distros as you want, but you will end up with something like Linux Mint. To me, Apple's OS is much more flexible, offers more features, and is easier to use. I know Linux is free because the source code is free, but it is not easy to use for someone who has limited time to invest. I use Apple's OS X for all of my day-to-day use; the only problem: I am jealous.
